

Roman Dubeň

Senior Associate

Roman Dubeň specialises in technology and IT law, general contract law, and gaming law.

During his practice he has been involved in providing legal services related mainly to the delivery, implementation and servicing of information systems for both the public and private sectors. Roman also specialises in related regulatory issues, particularly in the areas of cybersecurity and cloud computing, and other legal aspects such as the use of open source or standard software.

In the area of general contract law, he focuses on drafting and negotiating comprehensive contracts and analysing key contractual rights and obligations.

In the area of gaming law, Roman provides comprehensive legal support for domestic and foreign gambling operators and represents them in administrative and judicial proceedings.

Prior to joining our firm in 2018 as a fresh junior associate, he worked as a student at law firms providing general legal services.

Projects

- drafting model contracts for the implementation and servicing of IT systems, the supply and maintenance of related hardware for central government authorities, state funds and state legal entities
- advising a central government authority on the implementation of a new IT system for the collection of administrative fees in the form of on-premise
- advising a central government authority on the implementation of a new economic system and a HR and payroll system in the form of cloud computing
- advising a central government authority on contracting a new servicing provider for a core IT system
- advising a local government on the implementation and servicing of core and secondary IT systems for the exercise of governmental and local authority
- advising a central contracting authority on the provision of foreign and domestic electronic information sources for universities and scientific organisations
- advising banking and insurance service providers on the introduction of new core IT systems, negotiating with foreign suppliers and local implementers
- advising an international company engaged in the production, distribution and sale of fuels and petrochemical products in the implementation and servicing of various IT products
- comprehensive advising a leading international online service provider
- advising a foreign gambling operator on its entry into the Czech market, including representing it in obtaining a basic gambling licence
- representing foreign clients before the Ministry of Finance in proceedings concerning unauthorised online gambling operations
- representing gambling operators before the Ministry of Finance and the Customs Administration in proceedings concerning violations of the Gambling Act, or the conditions for gambling operations set out in the basic licence, and in subsequent court proceedings

Membership in professional associations

Czech Bar Association

Languages

Czech, English, Slovak

Education

Charles University, Faculty of Law, Prague (2017), Mgr. (summa cum laude)
Universiteit Leiden, Law School, Netherlands, (2016-2017), Erasmus programme

E: roman.duben@havelpartners.cz