

Kateřina Slavíková

Partner

Kateřina Slavíková specialises in pharmaceutical law, medical law, food law, as well as consumer protection, commercial law, personal data protection, and advertising and media regulation in general.

In the area of pharmaceutical law, she has extensive experience in providing day-to-day advice to leading innovative pharmaceutical companies, including managing legal and compliance projects. Kateřina specialises in regulations relating to pharmaceuticals and medical devices, advertising and unfair competition, pricing regulations, clinical trials, and relationships with pharmaceutical distributors and healthcare providers. She also focuses on telemedicine, audits of the handling of personal data and the management of medical records by healthcare providers, and data processing in the context of clinical trials of medicinal products.

In the area of food law, Kateřina specialises primarily in crisis management of food businesses, including food recalls, novel foods, regulation of health and nutrition claims, providing information to consumers, and consumer protection in general.

She also focuses on the regulation of addictive substances, cannabis, cosmetic products, and related areas.

Prior to joining our law firm, Kateřina worked in a multinational company engaged in the sale of food and food for special medical purposes, and in a Czech law firm for several years.
